Workshop on Environmental Awareness and Waste Management

Being environmentally aware means understanding how our behaviour impacts the environment and committing to making changes to our activities to protect the planet. Being environmentally friendly means reducing our impacts on the environment as much as possible. Individuals affect the environment in a variety of ways including pollution emissions to land, air, and water, use of natural resources, energy consumption, and waste. Individuals can have a positive effect on these large-scale problems with relatively minor changes to their lifestyles. For example, reducing the amount of plastic you buy, using public transport, and ensuring you recycle as much as possible. Due to the rise in greenhouse gas emissions, research suggests that global temperatures might increase by more than two degrees Celsius by the end of the century. This means extreme climate change, including hurricanes, droughts, and floods. These conditions jeopardize bio-diversity, human welfare, and wildlife. As we are living in such an unsustainable manner since past few decades, the security of our natural resources is also at risk. It is essential that everyone understands their impact on the environment and actively engages in attempts to promote sustainable development. Everyone has a responsibility to be more environmentally friendly and reducing carbon footprint can be achieved through very minor lifestyle changes. It is critical that we teach children and adults alike about the importance of environmental awareness, to ensure that the lives of future generations are secure. It isn't very fair that the severe environmental consequences of our actions will be experienced by innocent future generations.

When promoting environmental awareness, it is imperative to make sure that you are completely updated with the latest environmental news and developments to ensure that the information you are communicating is accurate. Environmental awareness campaigns refer to organizing and educating the general public about the importance of understanding our environment's vulnerability and protecting it.

This workshop will help to update us with the latest environmental news and developments. This program will highlight emerging issues like 'environment ethics', 'only one earth', 'waste management', 'eco-friendly waste management', 'E-waste management', 'sustainable development' environmental degradation' etc.
